Expertise

Canadians will respond to technical needs identified by national government partners

Canada is home to internationally recognized and sought-after experts across multiple sectors. To support poverty reduction in countries around the world, the TAP-EDM Project responds to needs identified by countries eligible for official development assistance, ranging from gender equality and vocational training to governance and natural resource management.

Global

citizenship fostered through deployment of Canadians and public engagement in international assistance

In partnership with Canada

In a gender-responsive and inclusive way, TAP provides an opportunity for learning, partnership and discovery for Canadians and partners alike.

Knowledge

and discovery advanced through diverse perspectives

A major part of the project is increasing awareness of Canadians as partners and global citizens in support of the country's international assistance efforts through strong public engagement and outreach efforts.

“We want Canadians and country partners to see the value of this country's international assistance through TAP's stories of change.”
