DÉFI MALI

Girls Education in Mali

In Mali, more than 30 percent of girls will never go to school. Basic education is often lost along with other basic rights as armed conflict increases in the northern and central regions of the country.

DÉFI is reducing barriers to learning through innovative strategies, such as interactive radio programs, and providing direct support to vulnerable families and communities affected by conflict.

In collaboration with Farm Radio International, Catholic Relief Services CPHDA and Education International, Alinea supports schools, regional and local authorities, communities and families to enable out-of-school girls and boys to access quality education in a safe and inclusive environment - in line with Canada's FIAP.

Alinea is an international development consultancy whose name means "new ideas," which is how our team of in-house technical experts strategizes, designs and delivers smart solutions to meet the world's changing challenges.
